LOCAL EQUESTRIAN COMPETES IN NATIONAL CONTEST

SHELBURNE, VT —The 2009 American Morgan Horse Association (AMHA) Youth of the Year Contest took place at this year's Grand National & World Championship Morgan Horse Show, held October 10-17 at the Oklahoma State Fairgrounds in Oklahoma City. Fifteen young women from across the country qualified at local and regional contests to compete for a month-long trip. Competing in this year's contest was Kristin King, 19, of Carrboro, North Carolina. She earned a spot in the national contest by placing first in the qualifying contest at the Southern States Regional Morgan Horse Show.

The contestants participate in a rigorous four-part test throughout the course of two days. Included are a written exam, an oral presentation and interview, a ridden or driven horsemanship pattern, and a judging division with a reasons portion.

King is a sophomore at Alamance Community College, where she is Vice President of Service for Phi Theta Kappa, a two-year school honor society. She also is active in Team in Training, an organization that raises money for the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society.

"Though there is only one champion, it was obvious throughout the contest that each participant had dedicated a tremendous amount of energy, time, and enthusiasm to her performance," said Amanda Ryan, AMHA's Membership Services and Promotions Coordinator. "I am very proud of our Youth of the Year contestants and of the continued growth of this program brought about by the hard work and dedication of so many volunteers, sponsors, and alumnae of the program." The winner's trip is generously sponsored by the Cynthia Elaine Epperson Trust.

Each year, dozens of youth contests are held across the country, hosted by horse shows, state Morgan clubs, and local youth groups. The Youth of the Year program offers participants an opportunity to improve his or her skills in the area of horsemanship, sportsmanship, public speaking, decision-making, and judging. The senior (age 14-21) winner of a local contest qualifies to compete in the Youth of the Year Finals, held each year at the Grand National & World Championship Morgan Horse Show. The winner of this prestigious title receives a month-long trip, during which he or she acts as an ambassador for the Morgan breed.
