Florence Chandler was bred to be a "blue hen mare." Her dam, Senata, champion Morgan mare at the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair, was a great Brunk mare carrying 18.75 percent of the blood of Justin Morgan. "A top-ranked mare was old Senata, for her name appears on the bottom line of the pedigrees of more good Morgans across the country and from almost every male line, than any other"—Mabel Owen. Florence Chandler's sire, Knox Morgan, champion stallion at both the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair and the 1916 Pacific Exposition in San Francisco, carried more than 21 percent of Justin Morgan's blood.

"Although [the excellent Florence Chandler] was accidentally killed as a very young mare, she left one [daughter] to carry on for her, Florette. Dam of Flyhawk, one of the most successful and prolific Morgan sires in history, Grand Champion at the Illinois State Fair at the age of 14 and after ten years in service on a Wyoming ranch, Florette was then sold to the United States Morgan Horse Farm in Vermont, for whom she continued her producing record. Although Flyhawk remains her only entire son of note, daughters Verda and Jemima produced well, while daughters Annadale and Damsel produced doubly well. Annadale, whose only daughters were Belldale and Conniedale, needed to do no more to insure her place in Morgan breeding history. Fawn, a rather plain mare with some size and considerable speed at the trot, was the dam of Lana, dam in turn of the noted California sire Rex's Major Monte; Oriole and the nice mare Naive, dam of UVM Felicity, a mare with considerable refinement and quality. Damsel, one of Florette's earlier foals and one of the very last by Bennington, was an excellent, typey mare, with substance, a great deal of breed character and a thoroughgoing ability to move out at the trot. Damsel's National Show wins were over a period of almost twenty years, and were in model, mare and foal, produce, and hack classes, attesting well to both her longevity and her versatility." –Mabel Owen, "Gold Star Mares," The Morgan Horse, September 1967, p12–13, 139–141.

"Florette was the dam of Flyhawk (by Go Hawk), Cooper, Damsel, and Baldwin (all by Bennington), McClellan (by Hudson), Annadale (by Monterey), Nabob (by Canfield), and Jemima, Goldette, Verda, Fawn, and Inwood (all by Mansfield)." –Ina Ish, "Out of the Archives: Knox Morgan: A Premier Sire, Part 6, Three from the Last Year—Florence Chandler," The Morgan Horse, July 1998, p106.

Although almost forgotten today, Florence Chandler's blood flows in the veins of thousands of living Morgans. worldwide, in Australia, Austria, Canada, France, Germany, Great Britain. Guatemala, Mexico, New Zealand, Puerto Rico and Sweden, as well as the USA. It is a shame she died so young that she never was photographed for one of the Brunk catalogs.
