

Kiana Pearson

Hi, my name is Kiana Pearson. I just graduated with a bachelor's degree in Zoology from Michigan State University in the spring, and shortly after I participated in a 3-week study abroad program in Kenya researching mammal behavior. I now work part-time as a veterinary assistant at a small animal vet clinic, and as a research technician in a mammalian embryology lab at MSU. In the summers, I also work as a veterinary assistant for an equine reproduction clinic. I hope to attend vet school and become an equine reproduction vet or go into research for reproductive and developmental biology. When I'm not working, I love spending time with and riding my Morgan, Dressed to Kill (Frankie), drinking coffee, reading, and baking. The AMHA and the many youth programs it offers have played a huge role in my life since I started riding 10 years ago, and I would be ecstatic to be selected as this year's Morgan Youth of the Year as a positive capstone to round out my last couple years of being a Youth.
